RARE BREED

From working at Electronics Research Inc. as a college engineering student to sitting at the company's helm today, Tom Silliman — who this month received the NAB Engineering Achievement Award — credits his father and many others with helping him along the way. “There are so many people who have made my life successful,” he says. “You’ve got to be careful talking about yourself because it’s too easy. When I talk to crowds I always try to think of that. What’s funny is what others think. People will talk about how you’ve done this or that, and you think: That’s it? That was nothing!”
